

THE CASPIAN TEAM INVESTIGATES

genre: detective, queer, drama

As the number of bodies found on the seaside increases and they are citizens of the other neighboring countries, the department forms a team specially made from the members from each country that has access to the Caspian Sea. It turns out each member is turkic origin.

Here will be some notes about the origin of the Caspian Sea.

The head of the team is I.D. Kaspi.

Kaspi (aro-ace she/her butchy-femme) - Her parents named her this way so she would be mysterious and threatening and wise, getting roots while surviving and being modern while having wild notes.

A man whom she refused attempted to kill her by throwing her into the Caspian Sea yet she stayed alive. Now known as "a woman who got the mercy of the Caspian Sea".

"A good detective must be compassionate towards the victim and the victim's loved ones," Kaspi believes.

In an episode where teens talk about outswimming each other, Kaspi halts them. Then a body floats out. Kaspi says it's a murder despite the evidence and finds the murderer.

The MC has a dad who is a manipulative liar dad and an abusive husband. When he asks forgiveness without doing anything to change MC says she forgot him but did not forgive and points out the gun ordering him to leave them alone.

She has a partner (boyishly playful nature but smart) who is secretly gay and as a case unveils someone blackmails him using intimate photos of him. Kaspi says that's okay to back up for him but she'll not, first he stays aside but in the end comes to help before the final battle.

A policewoman nicknamed Wild gets paired with Kaspi. Kaspi acts with laws, but Wild does not. First, they struggle to work together but in the end triumph by working as a cool duo.

Once Wild catches a serial abuser-murderer by posing as a prey by herself, he gets freed. Later the police department says he was stabbed in the rib which paralyzed his lower torso. Vers1: Everybody thinks of Wild but it's Kaspi. Vers2: It's Wild and Kaspi is covering her up.

Whenever Kaspi drinks dark tea, the teammates guess there's a problem as she is usually drinking dark tea only when concerned.

Another MC Ilana (the Caspian Team member) is a petite femme lesbian - who looks violent but has a keen brain and sharp mouth which is hypnotic. As she talks with a witness named Khatun (femme lesbian), they kinda get each other. Later at a party where the team attends, Ilana saves people from the shooter with her wit and the same witness woman who is also here hugs her in awe. Both enjoy the party in each other's company. One falls for the wit, the other for the kindness of the other. Later we'll see them on other dates also (Once Khatun visits Ilana, bringing treats for the team).

A cool lesbian biker-aunt (biker and mechanic) with a deep metallic jarring voice. She has a trans lesbian tomboy wife (ex-ballistic). They help orphans to meet good queer parents. Now they're helping with an investigation.

The trans MC is back as she said when getting fired for being trans. Even an ex-prisoner who looks like chasing her for revenge actually comes to thank the police for being kind to him and for the advice.

A journalist (a trans guy) tricks one group of the bad guys. They catch him yet he says he has something against their enemy group. Then he makes both groups deal with one another.

He's a childhood friend of a policewoman who was suspected of killing a convict that she caught but it came out the supporters of other criminals (which are one of the parties the journalist tricked) which the police had in the process did her dirty to get her away from their case.

Two butch lesbian undercover agents slip into two enemy female gangs separately. As they get to know each other, they collaborate, then discover that they are both on duty and decide to establish peace between the gangs as well. The duo identifies the bad elements, including moles within the gangs and at the agency. In a near-death situation, they find a way to each other which reaffirms their bond. The couple leaves the agency despite the disapproval of their superiors; As they kiss in front of the chef while a frame with the previous chef's picture cracks. They retire safely and begin a new life together.

White goth Redhead x Dark punk Brunette (top x switch gays) - unhinged extrovert x unhinged introvert. White has two robotic dobermans but both guys like cats better. White has one leg-to-torso joint floral mixed tattoo. Dark has an arm bracelet tattoo. White wears small sunglasses, Dark wears big sunglasses. White is an ex-search-and-rescue-specialist, while Dark is an ex-swat.

As White guards Dark lying to sleep, Dark lets him go to sleep, White hesitantly looks at the sofa, Dark says no here patting his bedside, White politely lies beside him getting feelings, and turns back so wouldn't disturb Dark. Next time, White offers Dark to hug him as Dark opens up to him as comfort.

The youngster musicians partially help in a case called useless cowards and weaklings by parents and neighbors but not the Caspian team treasures them which leads them to help the team.

A man kills his girlfriend and a stranger thinking she cheated on him with that guy which in the end comes out is not true, as the murderer is losing himself thinking about it, the girlfriend in fact survives (but stays in a coma for a while) as Kaspi was able to keep her survival a secret.

A trans girl was wounded and thrown into a pool from the third floor by her college mates. Surprisingly, she survives and wakes up in an autopsy room. Later, a guy resembling her younger brother subtly disrupts the suspects, occasionally dressing like her and employing psychological tricks to compel them to reveal the truth. The plot unveils a shaman who challenges societal norms by wearing female attire while identifying as male, emphasizing the elevated status females hold in turkic culture. Eventually, the girl recovers and expresses her resilience through singing.

One of the serial killers is an elderly woman (ex-combat trainer). Kaspi notes that there are people who want others to suffer as they suffer and are okay, but there are people who would emphasize. The elderly woman opens up about her neighbor who died because of an abusive husband as no one believed her and she was not able to leave him as he would not give away her kid. The little kid was left alone as the husband abandoned him. Then the woman decided to take action. She heard the Caspian Sea would "devour" bad people's bodies.
